Brand You Never Heard of Is Begging You Not to Stop Eating It

By LAURA STAMPLER March 5, 2014

Pretzel Crisps is really, really worried that people are going to give it up for Lent. So as part of a strange social media marketing move, it took to Twitter to randomly beg people not to forego the snack.

A BuzzFeed editor was implored to not give it up. (He wasn't going to ... he has no idea what Pretzel Crisps are ...)

As did a writer for The Tonight Show with Jimmy Fallon:

Social media marketing can be tricky. And although this isn't the worst Twitter gimmick we've seen, Pretzel Crisps' random piggybacking onto a religious holiday (with relatively impersonal messaging) seems a little off.

Ash Wednesday isn't typically a notable day on marketers' calendars, but in a social media-centric world, it's not entirely surprising for a company to try to tie itself to any event:

Precedential No. 25: On Remand, TTAB Again Finds PRETZEL CRISPS Generic For Pretzel Crackers

In May 2015, the CAFC (opinion here) vacated the TTAB's decision (here) finding the term PRETZEL CRISPS to be generic for "pretzel crackers," and it remanded the case to the Board for application of the correct legal standard, namely the two-part test set forth in its Marvin Ginn decision. The CAFC concluded that the Board had failed to consider evidence of the relevant public's understanding of the term PRETZEL CRISPS as a whole. On remand, the TTAB has again ruled that PRETZEL CRISPS is generic for pretzel crackers. Frito-Lay North America, Inc. v. Princeton Vanguard, LLC, 124 USPQ2d 1184 (TTAB 2017) [precedential] (Opinion by Judge Lorelei Ritchie).

Frito-Lay petitioned for cancellation of Princeton Vanguard's Supplemental Registration for the mark PRETZEL CRISPS for "pretzel crackers" [PRETZEL disclaimed], and it opposed PV's application to register that same mark on the Principal Register. In February 2014, the TTAB ruled in favor of Frito-Lay. In reaching its decision, the Board gave controlling weight to dictionary definitions of the constituent words, evidence of use by the public, including use by the media and by third-parties in the food industry, and applicant Princeton Vanguard's own use of the term. The Board found that when "pretzel" and "crisps" are combined, no additional meaning results, and therefore the purported mark PRETZEL CRISPS may be analyzed via its constituent terms, in accordance with In re Gould, using "the ordinary grammatical construction." TTABlogged [here].

The CAFC, however, concluded that the Board had failed to consider evidence of the relevant public's understanding of PRETZEL CRISPS in its entirety. TTABlogged [here]. The Board "stated in passing" that had it analyzed PRETZEL CRISPS as a phrase it would have reached the same conclusion because "the words strung together as a unified phrase also create a meaning that we find to be understood by the relevant public as generic for 'pretzel crackers.'" The court, however, found "no evidence that the Board conducted the necessary step of comparing its findings with respect to the individual words to the record evidence demonstrating the public's understanding of the combined term PRETZEL CRISPS."

Regardless of whether the mark is a compound term or a phrase, the applicable test is the same and the Board must consider the record evidence of the public's understanding of the mark as a whole. Am. Fertility, 188 F.3d at 1348-49. Our decision in Gould merely provides additional assistance in assessing the genericness of compound terms where it can be shown that "the public understands the individual terms to be generic," and the joining of those terms into one compound word provides no additional meaning. Id. It is not a short-cut and does not supplant the two-part test set forth in Marvin Ginn.

The CAFC therefore concluded that the Board applied the incorrect legal standard. On remand, the Board was directed to consider the evidence concerning the relevant public's understanding of the term PRETZEL CRISPS in its entirety. Furthermore, the Board must give "appropriate consideration to the proffered survey evidence."

Genericness: The test for genericness has two parts: (1) what is the genus of the goods; and (2) does the relevant public understand the designation at issue primarily to refer to that genus? There was no dispute that the category of goods here at issue is adequately defined by PV's identification of goods: "pretzel crackers." The relevant public comprises ordinary consumers who purchase and eat pretzel crackers. The focus, then, was on the relevant public's understanding of the term PRETZEL CRISPS.

The Board considered the dictionary definitions of "pretzel" and "crisp," the results of LexisNexis database searches of "pretzel crisps," media references, negative dictionary evidence, and consumer feedback.

The search results contained many references to the term "pretzel

"crisps" in lower case letters, while upper case letters were used for other terms that were "presumably considered by the authors to be brand names." On the whole, this evidence indicated "that consumers reading these articles may see Defendant as a potential source of 'pretzel crisps,' or 'pretzel crackers,' but would not view the applied-for mark "PRETZEL CRISPS" as a trademark identifying the source of the goods" Similarly, emails and product reviews used upper case letters for some words - often to indicate brands - but not for "pretzel crisps."

The Board found several declarations submitted by Defendant to be of limited probative value because the declarants were distributors of PV's products, not consumers. Moreover, although PV has used PRETZEL CRISPS as a source identifier, it has also used the term "pretzel crisps" to identify the type of goods, "which has contributed to and otherwise reflects a generic understanding of the term."

Each party submitted the results of a "Teflon" survey conducted to test how consumers perceive the term PRETZEL CRISPS. The Board, however, found these surveys to be irrelevant, because the Teflon survey format is not appropriate for a term that is not inherently distinctive. Because PRETZEL CRISPS is at least merely descriptive of the goods, the survey results merely reflect what the CCPA referred to as "de facto secondary meaning." See Weiss Noodle Co. 129 USPQ at 414.

Moreover, even if the survey results were relevant, they were not probative due to methodological flaws in the two surveys, and even if they were probative, the survey results overall supported a finding of genericness.

Considering all relevant evidence and arguments, the Board found that Frito-Lay had proven by a preponderance of the evidence that PRETZEL CRISPS is generic for "pretzel crackers."

Acquired Distinctiveness: For the sake of completeness, the Board also considered PV's claims that the term PRETZEL CRISPS had achieved acquired distinctiveness under Section 2(f). Frito-Lay established at least a prima facie case that PRETZEL CRISPS is highly descriptive of pretzel crackers. The burden shifted to PV to present evidence to overcome Frito-Lay's showing. Since the Board found the term "PRETZEL CRISPS" to be generic for "pretzel crackers," it considered, for purposes of the alternative Section 2(f) analysis, that the term is "close to the genericness boundary on the continuum." Consequently, PV had a "heavy burden of showing acquired distinctiveness."

PV pointed to its extensive sales and advertising, unsolicited media coverage, and its survey results, but the Board found that evidence inadequate. A secondary meaning survey (the "Mantis survey") proffered by PV concluded that 38.7% of participants associated the term "PRETZEL CRISPS" with "only one company." While the parties disagreed as to whether that fraction is sufficient to establish secondary meaning., the Board observed that "it has been stated that numbers in this range are 'marginal.'"

TTAB Practice and the Madrid Rule Changes \(with Ann Lamport Hammitt\)

While this evidence regarding sales and advertising is impressive, it is significantly undercut by the evidence discussed previously that the relevant public and many survey respondents, including more than half the respondents to the Mantis survey, perceive the term “pretzel crisps” as referring to a product that may derive from multiple sources. Ultimately, the question is not the extent of advertising and promotion, but the success of it in establishing brand recognition.

The Board found that PV's evidence of acquired distinctiveness was insufficient to establish acquired distinctiveness under Section 2(f).

Conclusion: The Board granted the petition for cancellation of PV's Supplemental Registration No. for PRETZEL CRISPS, and it sustained the opposition to registration. The Board also found, assuming arguendo that PRETZEL CRISPS is not generic, that the requirements for registration under Section 2(f) were not satisfied.

Read comments and post your comment here.

TTABlog comment: Compare the recent decision by the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, in which the court found persuasive a Teflon-type survey in ruling that BOOKING.COM is not generic for travel agency and hotel reservations services. [TTABlogged here]. Instead, the court deemed the term to be merely descriptive of the services, and then found that plaintiff had demonstrated secondary meaning as to hotel reservation services, but not as to travel agency services. If you were PV, would you seek review of the PRETZEL CRISPS decision via Section 1071(b) in a district court? or via 1071(a) at the CAFC? PS: PV has filed a civil action for review of the Board's decision, in the Western District of North Carolina.

Pretzel Crisps Double Facebook Likes In 36 Hours

Here's how Pretzel Crisps doubled its fan base in a day-and-a-half.

By Julie D. Andrews (<https://www.adweek.com/contributor/Julie-D-Andrews/>)

| April 11, 2011

(/files/2011/04/pretzelcrispslike.png) Most people like to save a buck or two when they can. The trick for marketers, as Pretzel Crisps discovered, is knowing where the customers are and how to attract them.

It turns out there were quite a few fans of Pretzel Crisps clicking around Facebook – and rewarding those customers with a money-saving opportunity was exactly the type of back-to-basics campaign that motivated fans to join the community.

The objective of the campaign was to drive fan growth on the Pretzel Crisps Facebook page by increasing the number of likes bestowed upon the brand. The strategy? Reward fans of the brand with deals when they join the community.

Responsibility

At Campbell, our Purpose — Real food that matters for life's moments

— has fundamentally altered how we think, talk and act about our food, from farm to table: from how our food is grown and the ingredients we select, to how we prepare our foods and the types of brands in our portfolio.

For nearly 150 years, Campbell has made real food and real experiences that connect our consumers to each other and to the world around them. People trust us to provide foods and drinks that are good, honest, authentic and flavorful — made from ingredients that are grown, prepared and cooked or baked with care.

And, now more than ever, consumers expect brands to be socially and environmentally responsible to serve a purpose in their lives, reflect their values and beliefs, and make a difference in the world. Moreover, they want companies like ours to be authentic and open, particularly about how and where their food is made, why certain ingredients are used and how those ingredients are produced and sourced.

We welcome this era of transparency as a new opportunity to connect with consumers. We know the people who buy our foods hold us to a higher standard, and we welcome that accountability. That's our character as a company.

Campbell Culture

What Do We Value?

Since 2014, we've been on a journey to become a Purpose-driven organization. It started by defining our Purpose, Real food that matters for life's moments, which helped us capture who we are, what we believe, and the company we want to be.

Our Purpose serves as our guide through the seismic shifts taking hold in consumer and industry trends. And, it's been a guide through the changes we've made within our own organization – through the repositioning of our businesses, the shift in our talent, and the addition of several companies that joined our team to accelerate our growth and innovation.

We've made great progress on our journey, including our work to define what real food means to us through our Real Food Philosophy. But, we have more to do. To truly activate the philosophy and become a purpose-driven organization with innovation at the helm, now is the time to reinvent our culture, and that starts with a simple question – What do we value?

In 2016 the Campbell Leadership Team set out to answer that question. Each word was meticulously and purposefully chosen with the goal of redefining Campbell's Values to create the behaviors and culture we need to live into our Purpose.

We believe in these Values and the accompanying behaviors that put forward a clear and simple call-to-action in our relentless effort to grow and innovate. They are a representation of what our company and our people have always stood for, while also inspiring us to embrace change to compete effectively in a dynamic marketplace.

Diversity and inclusion, workplace flexibility and corporate social responsibility are key elements of our culture, as you can see in related sections on this site.

We are Purpose-driven and Values-led. Join us on our journey as we become the leading health and well-being food company and help us deliver superior consumer value.

Diversity & Inclusion

At Campbell, fostering a diverse, inclusive workforce that reflects the consumers we serve is critical to our continued success. We understand that having an environment in which everyone can succeed is the key to winning in today's global marketplace – and we offer a wide range of initiatives to ensure that we attract, engage and retain a talented and diverse workforce.

We have established Business Resource Affinity Networks (BRANs) to enable employees from similar backgrounds and interests to network, develop professionally, promote cultural awareness, encourage community involvement and provide mutual support. Our BRANs are open to all employees, and

To measurably increase our cultural competency and understanding of diversity and inclusion, we also offer classroom, online and experiential training to all Campbell employees. Many of our U.S. employees have participated in diversity and inclusion training opportunities, while many business and functional teams participated in relevant book and film clubs, museum visits, cultural presentations and speaker series.

50 Halloween Candy Alternatives

I imagine most parents are in agreement with the reality that Halloween is both fun and challenging. It's super fun to see kids (and families!) costumed up and super not fun to deal with candy battles. Over the years I have experimented with all manner of candy bowls: full out traditional candy, all organic, non-candy alternatives...ultimately deciding that a mixed bowl is ideal given that food allergies are a very real thing (Violet has a tree nut allergy so our awareness has become heightened on that count) and some kids actually don't like candy (really, I know some of these kids!). As I'm thinking about stocking up for next week, I thought it would be fun to share a list of Halloween candy alternatives. There are 50 ideas for you, and feel free to add any other favorites via the comments below!

The list is split into food and non-food items and you can offer the regularly packaged versions or many of them are available in Halloween-themed packaging/shapes. I think for the non-food items I'm going with glow sticks and slap bracelets!

In this episode, we're recording from a cabin in the East Texas woods! We talk about our Super Awesome Gaming Weekend in which we logged almost 30 plays!

Games we talk about include The Dragon & Flagon, Mansions of Madness: Second Edition, Deception: Murder in Hong Kong, and A La Carte.

Plus, Lara's Game Night Grub segment provides an answer to baked potato lovers, and we end the episode with some advice on not forcing gaming on important people in your life.

LOADED BAKED POTATO DIP

(From <http://www.brownneyedbaker.com/loaded-baked-potato-dip/>)

yield:8 to 10 servings

prep time:10 minutes

total time:10 minutes

This loaded baked potato dip combines all of the fantastic flavors of a classic loaded baked potato – sour cream, bacon, cheese and scallions. Scoop away with potato chips!

INGREDIENTS:

16 ounces sour cream

1 (12-ounce) package bacon, cooked and finely chopped

8 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, shredded (about 2 cups)

2 green onions, thinly sliced

DIRECTIONS:

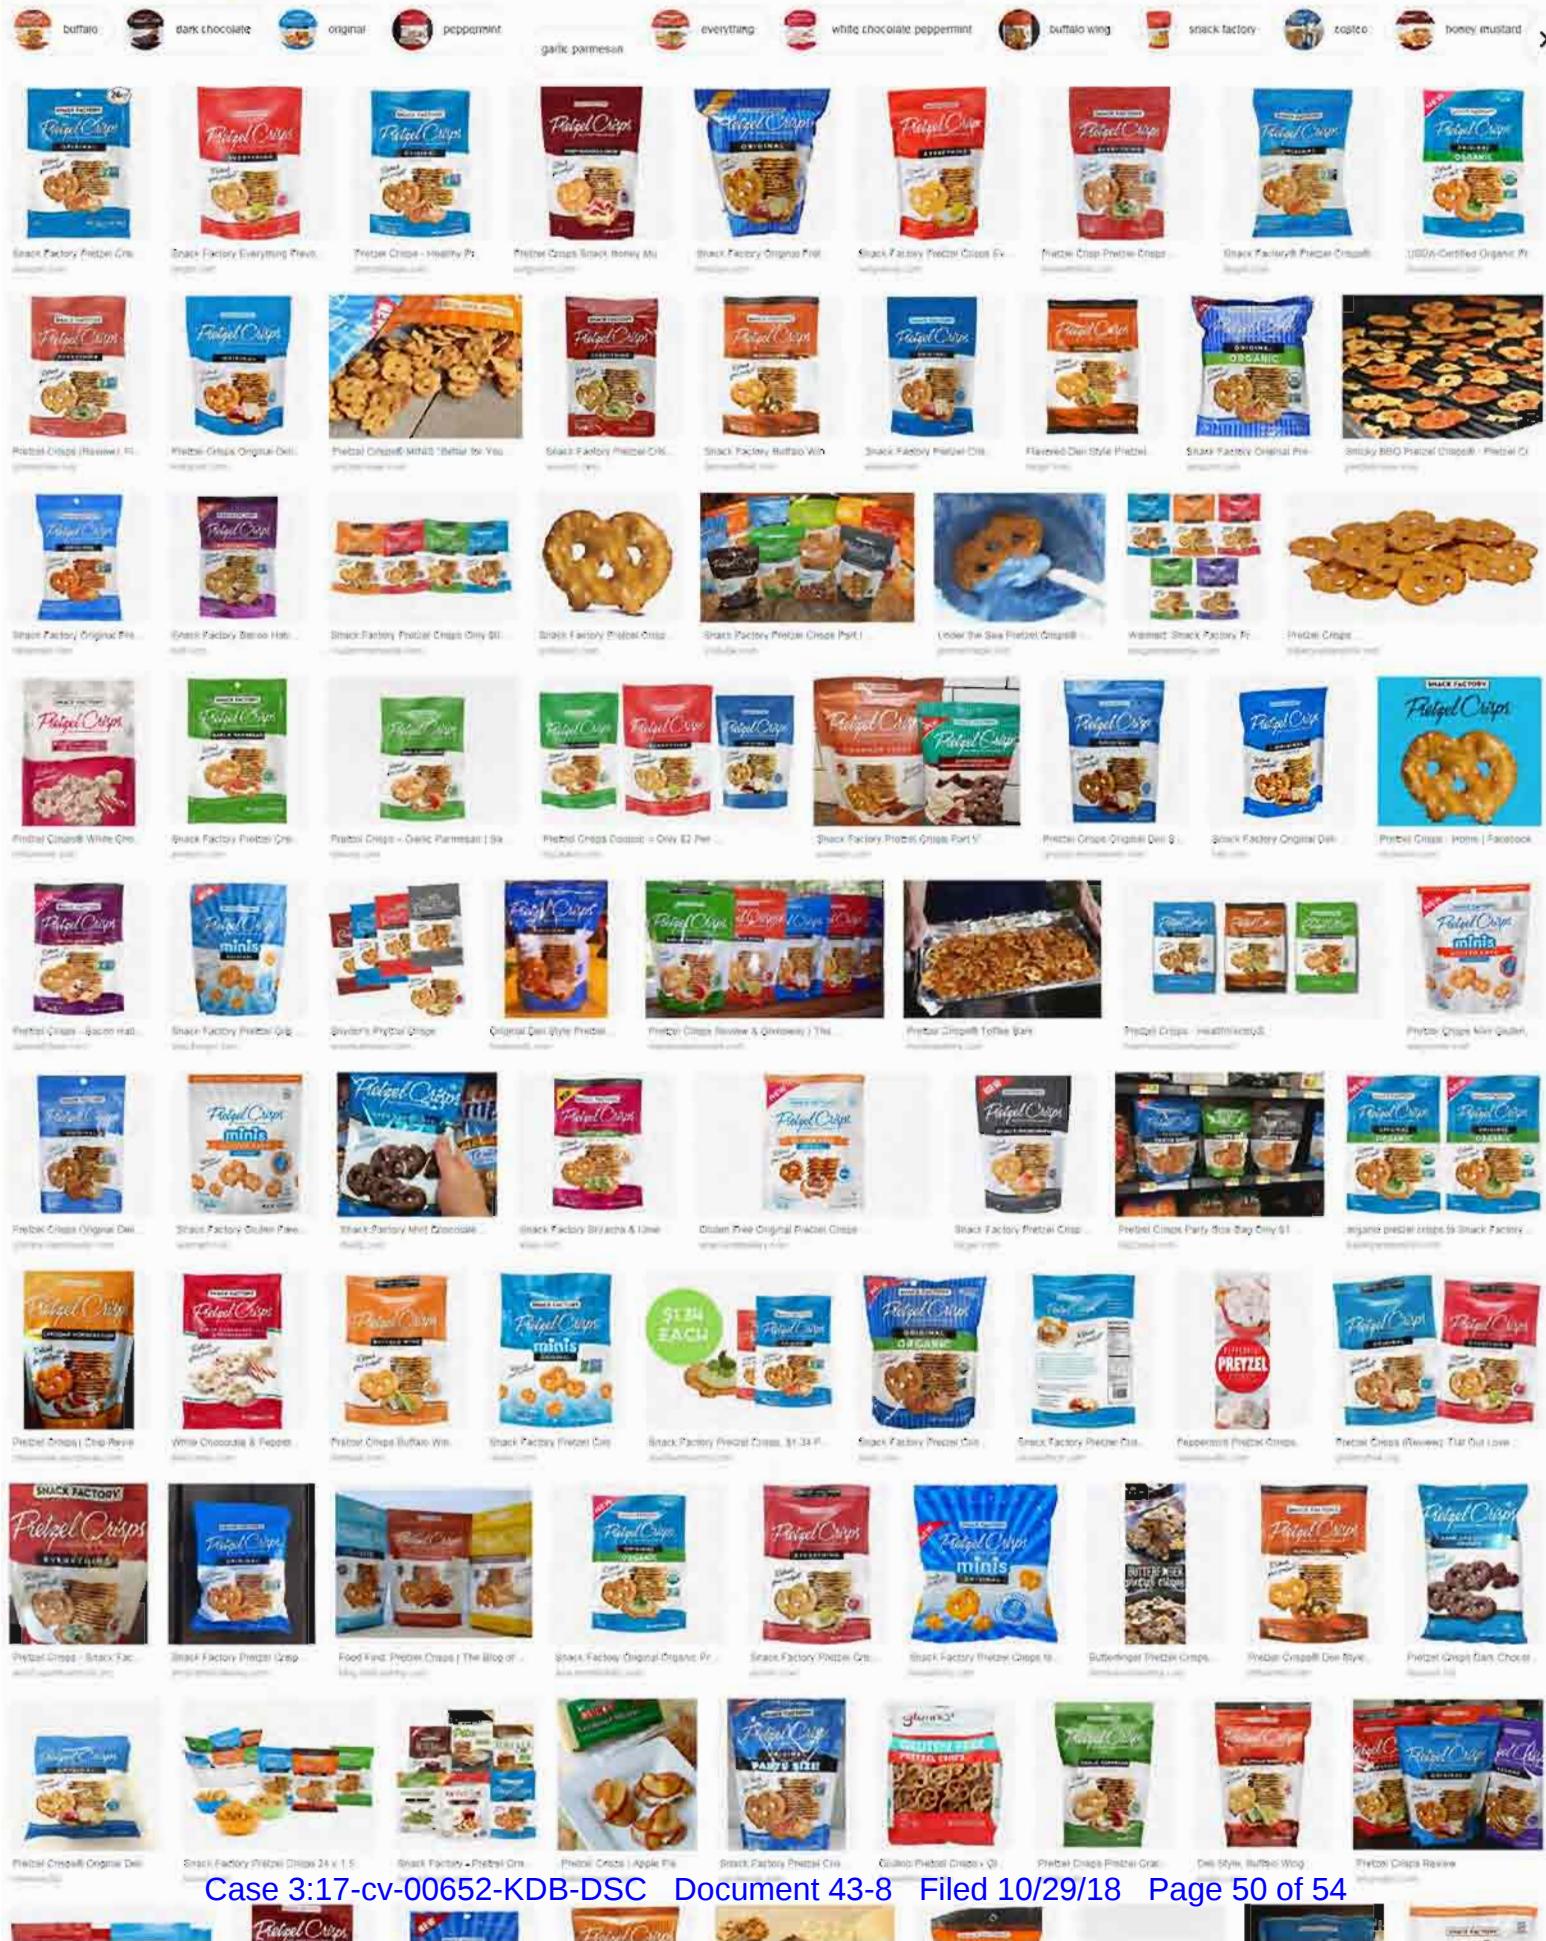

Combine all ingredients in a medium bowl and refrigerate for at least one hour before serving to allow flavors to meld together. Garnish with extra shredded cheese, crumbled bacon, and chopped green onions. Serve with your favorite potato chips or pretzel crisps. Dip can be stored in an airtight container in the refrigerator for up to 1 week. Let sit at room temperature for 30 minutes be
